

MIGRATING TO THE CLOUD

A multinational insurance company was undertaking a cloud migration and needed to build a monitoring solution for the cloud and at the same time migrate all its legacy tools and infrastructure to the cloud. In particular the organisation was looking for better overall visibility of its apps whilst migrating these to the cloud as well as visibility over new 'born in the cloud apps'. The insurer had an on-premise SIEM that didn't have the capability to adequately monitor the cloud migration. It therefore called in security and analytics specialists, RiverSafe, to help with this programme of work. RiverSafe helped the organisation to define its monitoring policies for newly migrated cloud that took into consideration both existing and new apps.

THE GOAL

RiverSafe also helped the insurer to design and build a SIEM solution for the cloud. The new policies dictated that everything needed to be automated, therefore RiverSafe set about automating the SIEM platform working with the in-house DevOps team in order to deploy and automate all their cloud data sources within the SIEM. This included configuring alerts and dashboards so that they could see levels of security both before and after the migration.

THE RESULTS

Once the migration is completed the SIEM platform will be used for incident response and security correlation rules, machine learning, integrated with threat intelligence and used by the SOC team to migrate away from its legacy systems. RiverSafe also assisted with consulting around third party integrations advising on which cloud tools were complimentary with other technologies, such as well as helping with particular use cases in order to deliver better visibility.
